

The Primates' Jamboree

--Author Unknown-revised by Gary & Marlene Panell

The primates one day
had a big jamboree,

    Their leader sat in front of the tallest
coconut tree

And said with a chuckle, "My good
fellow primates,

    If you want a good
laugh, just hear what
man states,

Some teachers of men
say that evolution is
real cool,

    And are training
each youngster to grow up a fool,
The kids all run wild
and never show
respect,

    Living a life style
any Ape would reject.

No well-mannered
primate dictates to
his teacher,

    Shoots at the police officer or beats
up the preacher.

Aborts a baby, or
murders with a gun,

    And then laughs
and says, 'We're just having fun!'

Primates, my friends, have
RESPECT FOR EACH OTHER

    We hand out no
sass to our father or mother.

The picture I've

painted you'll agree
is quite sad.

But listen, my
brothers and sisters,
I'm boiling mad!
For some men are teaching, (those who think they're so
great!)

That the Creature Called Man was at one time a primate.
An ape just like us,
and what's more, if you please,

He claims that at one time he swung
through the trees.
Fellow primates, I think this is going too far.

We don't envy
their home, their
wealth, or their car.
But when they will
spread such a
horrible rumor

It's time for all primates to lose their
good humor.
So, come, you must help me prepare a
big sign,

Protesting that man's no descendant
of mine.

If evolution is true,
then friends, we are
sunk,

For I'd sooner be father to weasel or
skunk!"
